Social and Personal

President Ephraim Katzir yesterday greeted participants in the special seminar on "Zionism in our time." The Prime Minister, Yitzhak Rabin, was present at the opening session of the seminar, in which scientists and academics from Israel and abroad are participating.

The Mount Carmel International Training Centre for Community Services has started two summer courses, in English and Spanish, for 40 students from 21 countries. One course is on home industries handicrafts, the other on rural community development.

The UJA Miami Doctors' Mission met last Friday with Dr. Jack Karpas, associate director-general of the Hadassah Medical Centre in Jerusalem.

Jonathan Mendlow of the Political Science Department of the Hebrew University will lecture tonight on "Vigilant Yadin and Coalition Government" at 8 p.m. at the Hebrew University Forum meeting at the United Synagogue, 2 Agmon Street, Jerusalem.

The Rabbinical Council of the U.S. and Canada will hold its annual summer meeting in Haifa today and tomorrow. Council president Rabbi W.S. Wuerlitzer, Haifa's Chief Rabbi She'ar Yashuv Cohen and others will take part in a public debate at the Rothschild Centre tonight.

Arkia raises flight prices by 30%

TEL AVIV. — Arkia yesterday announced it was raising the prices of all flights except package tours to Eilat and Sinai — by 30 per cent. The price rises have been approved by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry.

An Arkia spokesman for the company announced that the 30 per cent increase was necessitated by increased prices the company had to pay for petrol and spare parts. This is the first rise in flight prices for a year.

Coffee, cocoa prices to rise shortly

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Coffee and cocoa prices are to increase shortly, following a decision taken last week by the Commerce Ministry's price committee.

Instant coffee will rise in price by seven per cent, while the roasted brands will go up by 50 agrot for a 100-gram packet. The cocoa price is to be hiked by 20 per cent.

The increases are a result of the rise in coffee bean prices on the world market and the Israel pound's devaluation.

THE OPEN-AIR concert in Tel Aviv's Kikar Ma'abei Yisrael last week, by the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, has proved such a success, that it is intended to make this a permanent yearly feature. Tel Aviv Mayor Shlomo Lahat said at yesterday's session of the Municipal Council.

Mixed reaction to 5-day week

The scheme for a five-day working week for industrial workers mooted by Histadrut Secretary-General Yehoshua Rabinovitch on Friday has met with a mixed response from representatives of various groups who would be directly affected.

In Jerusalem, Labour Minister Moshe Baran was in favour: "I like the idea and I am appointing a committee of experts to explore the economic and social effects of such a change," Baran said.

According to Baran, a shortened work week would probably turn out to be a major incentive in getting service workers to switch to manufacturing jobs.

A former secretary of the Jerusalem Labour Council and veteran labour leader himself, Baran added, "Make no mistake about it: a good part of today's absenteeism is due not to illness but to workers' staying away to take care of ordinary chores which cannot be seen to after work."

Another good reason for adopting a five-day week, he said, was to attract more women to industry. "If they could be assured of a whole day in which to take care of household tasks, they would be more willing to apply for jobs in factories, where more and more workers are needed for export industries."

Asked whether introduction of a five-day week would reduce productivity generally, Mr. Baran replied that preliminary studies undertaken by the Ministry in the past indicate that not only is overall productivity unaffected by such a reduction, but in some instances has actually increased. He cited results from two Israeli industries who have gone over to a five-day week: Tadiran and Electro-Optical Industries.

But the manufacturers were less enthusiastic. Chairman of the labour committee of the Manufacturers Association, Dov Lautman, thought the five-day work week was "impractical at present and would accomplish little good, and perhaps do some damage." However, he admitted that no definite stand would be taken by his association until all aspects of the problem had been studied "in depth."

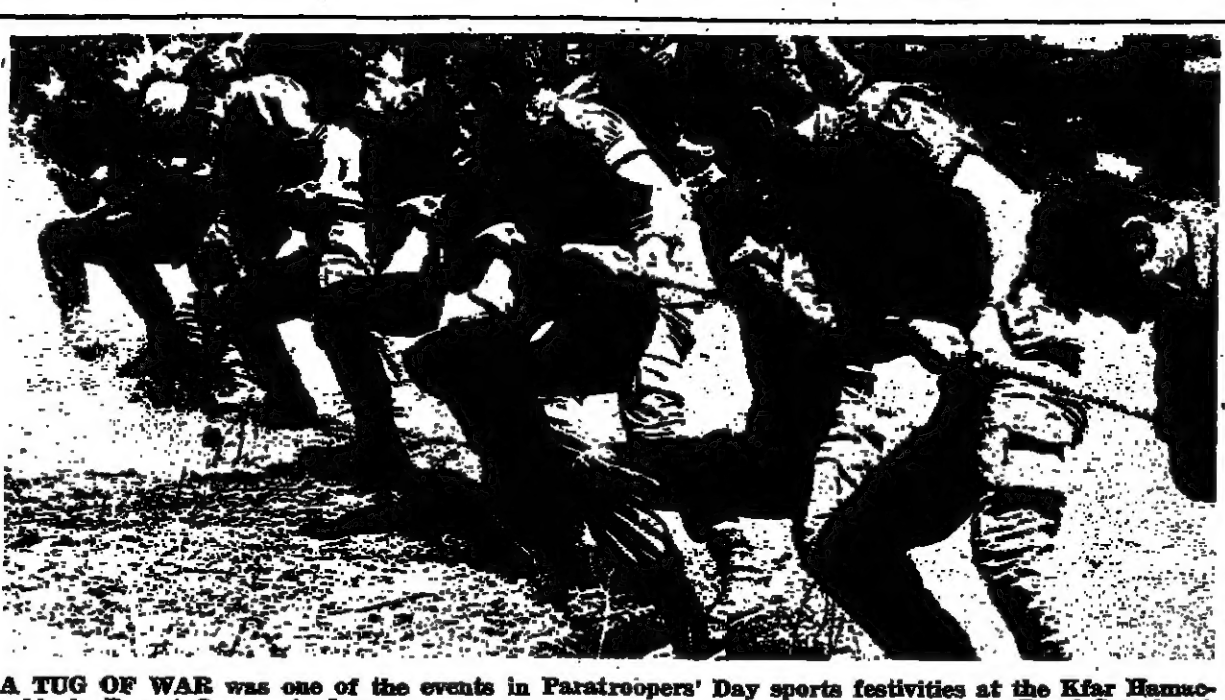

Basically, he believed that "Israel is geared to a six-day work week. School children go to school six days a week. If the industrial worker is to go to the plant only five days a week, he still won't have a 'long weekend.' He won't leave without his wife and children, so if he isn't at the plant on Friday, he will be buying at the supermarket for his wife."

If the work week was shortened it meant lengthening the work day from eight to nine hours. "Today, production falls during the eighth hour of work; it will fall still more during the ninth hour." A five-day work week, Mr. Lautman thought, would even hurt Israel's chances of penetrating the Common Market.

Economically, he thought that a "five-day week won't attract many persons to industry; within a few months every service worker will be demanding equal conditions, and thus switching from services to industry will give workers little advantage."

A source in the Clerical Workers' Union shared Lautman's pessimism on this point. "The whole idea isn't serious," he told a Post reporter. "If production workers in factories work five days and the clerks six, you'll have a civil war on your hands."

Treasury sources refused to comment on the Histadrut plan. They said that they would only be able to do so when they received the document.

A TUG OF WAR was one of the events in Paratroopers' Day sports festivities at the Kfar Hama-cabia in Ramat Gan yesterday.

Renger tours north, talks to refugees

By YORAM HAMIZRAHI
Jerusalem Post Reporter

METULLA. — Bundestag President Annemarie Renger yesterday toured the northern border area, and watched Lebanese refugees crossing into Israel.

Accompanied by IDF officers and officials from the German Embassy in Tel Aviv, Mrs. Renger first visited Metulla where she met Mayor Assaf Frankel and was briefed on the security situation along the northern frontier with Lebanon.

The party then toured the border itself, and witnessed Lebanese refugees crossing into Israel at a first-aid station near Metulla, where Mrs. Renger chatted to some of the refugees. Although the Embassy officials insisted that no "special significance" could be attached to the visit, they prevented photographers from taking pictures or filming her conversation with the Lebanese.

Mrs. Renger, whose official visit to Israel ended last Wednesday, leaves for Germany this morning. Beate Klarsfeld yesterday sent a cable to the German Ambassador in Tel Aviv, complaining of the fact that he had failed to arrange even a brief meeting between Mrs. Renger and members of her Nazi-hunting organization.

Speiser election 'shows decline of Rabinowitz'

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A senior Labour source said yesterday he believed the election of Elyahu Speiser as Secretary of the Tel Aviv Labour district showed a decline in the power of Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz.

Rabinowitz, who had been considered all-powerful here, for a long time held numerous meetings with youth and other groups in an attempt to get one of his own men elected to the post, which became vacant when Dov Ben Meir was elected secretary of the local labour council.

According to one report, Rabinowitz had said Speiser would be elected "over my dead body." But none of his nominees even presented their candidacy, sensing they had no chance, the source said. Speiser was elected on Thursday in a secret ballot by 840 members, with two abstentions and no opposers.

It was the first time the council and not a small group of veteran party leaders elected their secretary.

Chess instructor Roman Jinibashvili arrived here from the Soviet Union as a new immigrant last week. Jinibashvili, who has an international reputation as an instructor, has worked with world number two player Viktor Korchnoi, who defected to Holland some days ago. Jinibashvili is a chemical engineer by profession.

Lebanese tobacco sorters start work in Safad

By YAA'OOV FRIEDLER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

SAFAD. — Fifteen Lebanese tobacco sorters began work in the Dubek plant here yesterday. According to reports, a "friendly atmosphere" reigned between Lebanese and Israelis in the plant, with Circassians translating conversations between Israelis and the Lebanese. They will return tomorrow with five additional workmates.

The workers were taken to Safad from the border post at Dov. Some of the tobacco they sorted may have been of Lebanese origin, because the Dubek plant bought part of the Southern Lebanon tobacco crop, which could not be exported via Beirut because of the civil war.

Lebanese couple joins old friends

Jerusalem Post Reporter

METULLA. — The clock was set back 30 years here yesterday when a Moslem couple from Lebanon joined Israeli friends in a nostalgic rendering of songs of the old Yishuv.

The couple obtained permission to cross the border and renew their friendship with local residents they had known before the 1948 War of Independence. Speaking fluent Hebrew and Yiddish, they reminisced about the old days — and then went into one of the houses and made phone-calls to long-lost friends all over Israel.

The high-point of the reunion was the Lebanese woman's rendering — in Hebrew — of the old pre-state youth movement favourite, "The Red Flag."

Fifteen persons were in custody yesterday in a police investigation into the death on Friday of an 86-year-old woman in Kiryat Yovel.

Mrs. Adella Rosental was found on Sunday with her hands and feet bound to her bed. She was face down and may have died from suffocation. A police spokesman said last night the exact cause is still being investigated.

Signs of forcible entry to the apartment suggest that Mrs. Rosental may have surprised robbers and been overcome by them. She was last seen by neighbours on Friday going out to shop for the Sabbath.

Police said that Mrs. Rosental, a widow for 10 years, had children living at a kibbutz. They were on vacation, however, and had not been contacted by yesterday. Mrs. Rosental, who spoke only Rumanian, had little contact with her neighbours. Police have set up a special team to investigate the incident.

Army Ombudsman cites need for leadership

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The army's Ombudsman, Rav-Aluf (res.) Haim Laskov, yesterday reported that commanders sometimes delegated powers to subordinates "who erred in judgement and lacked a feeling for their fellow man." He further said there were "instances in which the style of leadership did not suit reservists."

These findings, the former Chief of Staff told military correspondents, were based on examination of complaints by reservists.

Laskov said that a need for a way to build leadership and to instill proficiency in reservists was stressed at a meeting with the senior staff of the army's manpower branch. He said, "There should be a style of leadership which will convince every reservist that his time is really utilized, that he didn't waste his time, and that the time was for training or other employment... was used to refreshen knowledge and advance... proficiency."

Cases cited by the Ombudsman included that of three soldiers of a tank company who were partly justified in complaining against the low level of training when they were called up for manoeuvres in Sinai in 1974. He also sided with a woman who complained that her husband was called up despite a decision of the committee for coordinating reserve duty to postpone his service.

Laskov said his recommendations have led to a substantial number of reforms in the administration of the army. The army examined his recommendations "with an unusual degree of open mindedness," he added.

As result of reforms implemented thus far, there was a 13 per cent decline in the number of complaints from 11,056 in 1974/75 to 9,620 in the year ending March 31.

AN IMPRESSIVE rise both in numbers of students and in courses of study for the south of the country, was disclosed yesterday by Azriel Nitzani, southern district director in the Ministry of Education. He added that 85 per cent of the region's three-year-olds and 95 per cent of its four-year-olds were receiving kindergarten education.

IN THE CABINET

'Regular contacts' with Argentina on detainees

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon told the Cabinet yesterday that Israel is having "regular contacts" with the Argentine government about the eight Jews arrested in Cordoba, 12 days ago.

Allon reiterated that the arrests were caused by "a misunderstanding" and expressed hope that they would soon be released.

The detainees are Yosef Pick, an emissary of the World Zionist Organization's Youth Department, and his wife Kati; Amnon Rudin, another emissary; Yitzhak Estrugo, a third emissary, and his wife Clara; two local Argentinian consellers in the department's Buenos Aires office; and the sister of secretary in the department.

Foreign Ministry sources said yesterday that there was a slowdown in developments because Sunday is part of the Argentine work day. The Argentine Foreign Minister has said that he would do his utmost to quicken the investigation of the detainees and to speed up the matter.

The WZO has said from their news of the arrests that the emissaries are involved only in educational and community work and not in political activity.

Kissinger reassurance on U.S. contacts with PLO

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has again stressed to Israel that the "technical cooperation" between the U.S. Embassy in Beirut and the PLO can in no wise be interpreted as recognition of the PLO, even indirectly.

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon reported this in the Cabinet yesterday, when he gave details of the Saturday meeting in Washington between Kissinger and Ambassador Simha Dinitz. Kissinger reassured Dinitz that the permanent American stand of denying the PLO's recognition because of the PLO's policy towards Israel, had not changed.

One of the reasons why the evacuation of Americans and other foreigners was carried out by sea, Kissinger added, was because this involved lower-level and simpler negotiations with the PLO men controlling the area than an evacuation by land.

Reviewing the political implications of the "Damascus agreement" between the Syrian government and the PLO in the Cabinet, Allon said the widely contradictory actions from different Arab states were yet another sign of the agreement was not likely to rule out the possibility that the PLO would try and break agreement if it got fresh air and rebuilt its strength.

Washington and Jerusalem agreed that the "Damascus agreement" by throwing the Soviet Union balance, has considerably restricted its room for manoeuvre in Arab world. Moscow could not defend the radical Arab leaders endorsing Syrian actions in Lebanon. Nor did it wish to put many eggs in the Syrian basket since it did not consider the masius regime to be either reliable or docile. However, Soviet criticism of Syria was voiced by low-level echelons and by the media — by Kremlin leaders, it was not.

The Cabinet was also briefed by Army Intelligence Chief Shlomo Gazit on the latest Syrian moves in Lebanon and on the "Damascus agreement."

Peres reports on minor violations of Sinai accord

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Defence Minister Shimon Peres reported to the Cabinet yesterday on several minor violations of the Sinai interim agreement by Egypt, which he discussed on Friday with Lieutenant-General Ezer Weizman, chief coordinator of the UN Middle East peace-keeping missions.

Peres said he complained that Egyptian helicopters had several times in recent weeks overflown the buffer zone, although overflights are strictly regulated by the agreement. The Beduin tribes located in the northern part of the zone had wandered down to its southern part in defiance of the understanding reached at the time. Also, Egypt had more infantry in the limitation of forces zone, west of the Suez Canal, than Israel had agreed to.

Peres said he told Shlomo: "Israel holds that negotiations have to be conducted before an agreement is signed. Afterwards, parties are obliged to keep agreement without the slightest deviation."

(The Post understands that an ambiguity does exist with regard to the number of Egyptian infantry referred to, since the agreed can be interpreted variously in terms of units or to individual officers. However, with regard to overflights and the Beduin, no big deal exists. At the same time, Israel does not plan to make major issue of the violations this point.)

Also in the Cabinet, Peres reported on the "open border" Lebanon, the jobs provided Lebanese workers, and the sale of various commodities.

He said as many summer visitors and students were entering Samaria and the Gaza Strip last year.

National highway master plan approved

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Cabinet yesterday approved the national highway master plan, which foresees some 6,000 km. of public roadway tied into a national highway network by 1986.

One aim of the project — which was described by Haim Kubersky, director-general of the Interior Ministry and chairman of the National Council for Planning and Construction — is to bring the Negev "closer" to the rest of the country by improving road communications between Eilat, the Dead Sea area and Ashdod Port. Other objectives are better routes leading to the Capital and good roads between development towns and urban centres.

Kubersky added that the Government's long-range plan for population distribution is also being considered in connection with the highway master plan.

The plan, if developed, would also spur the economic growth of the Galilee. Among the proposals: new multi-lane highways between Haifa and Nazareth, Acre and Hesh Valley, Tiberias and Kiryat Shmona.

Tel Aviv would be ringed by three new circular highways, permitting motorists to bypass the city, Zehava and Dov Yaron (Heimans) are happy to announce the birth of their

A Thought for the Three Weeks

In the week of the Destruction, a word about the Rebuilding...

Further to the suggestion of the LUBAVITCHER REBBE, RAB BENACHAIM M. SCHNEERSON, that the laws of the building of the Temple be studied during the current Three Weeks of mourning for its destruction, here is another text in the series:

"It is a positive commandment to build a House unto the Almighty in which sacrifices may be offered, and to which the people may throng at the three Pilgrim Festivals, as it is written: 'At they shall make Me a Sanctuary.' The Tabernacle described in the Torah, which Moses built, was a temporary structure, as it is written: 'For you have not yet come to your resting-place as to your inheritance.'"

— From Maimonides' Code, Laws Concerning the Temple, 1:1

"Those who lament the Destruction of Jerusalem will surely witness its Rebuilding."

OLYMPIC GAMES

MARATHON UPSET MARKS
LAST DAY OF OLYMPICS

The Olympic track and field programme ended on Saturday night with a runaway shock marathon win for East Germany's Waldemar Cierpinski, an expected victory for New Zealander John Walker in the glamour 1,500 metres event.

Lasse Viren of Finland, running in his first marathon, made a brave effort to add a third gold medal to his 5,000 and 10,000 metres titles, but the pace was too punishing. He finished fifth.

Cierpinski, who will be 26 on Tuesday, ran the fastest marathon in history to win East Germany's first gold medal in the event and eclipse the defending champion, American Frank Shorter, who finished second.

Walker, 23, had to fend off a late challenge from Belgian Ivo Vandamme. He will spend the rest of his life wondering whether he would have beaten his greatest rival, Tanzania's Filbert Bayi, prevented from competing by an African boycott of the Games.

East Germany's marathon win climaxed an astonishing performance in the Montreal Games by the country of only 17 million people. It was second only to the Soviet Union in the medals table, eight golds behind the Russians but five ahead of the U.S.

The marathon, the most gruelling event of the games was run over 42.195 km, mostly in pouring rain. It became a two-man battle between 25-year-old Shorter and Cierpinski at about the half-way mark.

The East German forged ahead with about a third of the race to run and sped on alone through the well-lit streets of Montreal to be wildly cheered by the 75,000 crowd packing the Olympic stadium.

Baerbel Eckert, the 200-metre champion, picked up her second gold medal when she anchored East Germany to victory in the women's 4x100 metres relay in an Olympic record time of 42.55 seconds. She ran brilliantly in the final leg to overhaul West German Annegret Kroniger, who has been given an advantage of nearly two metres by Richter at the final changeover.

The Soviet team placed third. The men's sprint relay was a much more clear-cut affair, with the U.S. hanging on to their title by a convincing margin. The U.S.

boxing champions at the same games.

Cuba had to be satisfied with three boxing titles, the same as it won in the 1972 Munich Games.

Teofilo Stevenson of Cuba became the first two-time Olympic heavyweight champion in history when he stopped Mircea Simion of Rumania with 25 seconds left in the fight.

Stevenson was content to jab the backing Rumanian for most of the fight. Then, in the third round, the Rumanian started to open up and was winning the round when he threw a jab. Stevenson's right smacked over the jab and crashed Simon's jaw. The Rumanian got up but his corner asked the referee to stop the fight.

U.S. marine corporal Leon Spinks floored Cuban Sixto Sorla twice with savage right hands to take the Olympic light-heavyweight championship.

His brother, middleweight Mike Spinks, beat world champion Ruffin Ruskley of Russia badly in the third round to become the fourth American to win an Olympic boxing championship.

Earlier, lightweight Howard Davis won a unanimous decision over Simion Cutov of Rumania, and Leo Randolph, a high school student from Tacoma, Washington, used accurate punching to win the Olympic flyweight gold medal with a 3-2 decision over Ramon Duvalon of Cuba.

World champion Jorge Hernandez of Cuba spared North Korean Byong Uk Li with jab and crisp right hands and won the Olympic 106-pound light-flyweight boxing championship on a 4-1 decision.

Left-handed Angel Herrera, also of Cuba, knocked out Richard Nowakowski of East Germany with a crunching left hook and won the Olympic featherweight boxing championship with hard shots to the head.

Yong Jo Gu of North Korea, in the third round, won the Olympic gold medal in the bantamweight boxing division with a unanimous decision over U.S. army Sgt. Charles Mooney.

Ivanika Khristova of Bulgaria won the Olympic women's shot put with a games' record throw of 21.16 metres.

Nadejda Chizova of the Soviet Union was second at 20.96 and Helena Fibingerova of Czechoslovakia was third.

Miss Khristova's distance broke the Olympic record of 21.3 metres set four years ago by Miss Chizova.

Marianne Adam of East Germany, the world record holder at 21.9 metres, could do no better on Saturday than 20.55.

Then the Soviets denied Spain its last and best chance for a 1976 gold medal when they overtook the Spaniards in the stretch and won the four-man kayak race. Like all the events held on Saturday, it was over the 1,000-metre distance.

Spain's crew had won the world championship in the events in 1975.

The third Russian victory came from Sergey Nagornoy and Vladimir Romanov in the kayak pairs.

The individual races were taken by a pair of dark horses, East Germany's Rudiger Helm in the kayak and Yugoslavia's Matija Ljubek in the Canadian canoe.

American hopes were dashed in the final events and they had to settle for one gold, three silvers and two bronze.

Boxing

America's big triumph came in the finale of the boxing tournament, when it collected five gold medals. Two of them were won by Michael and Leon Spinks, the first time the brothers had emerged as

beats Poles,
3-1, for gold

East Germany stripped Poland of their Olympic soccer championship in Montreal last night, beating them by 3-1 on a sodden pitch in heavy rain.

The East Germans had a flying start, scoring six minutes from the start when Hans-Joachim Schade scored from Hofner's cross.

In seven more minutes, the East Germans seemed to have clinched the gold when Hoffman completed a slick four-man move with a decisive drive.

But the 71,619 crowd, a record for soccer in North America, was treated to a brave Polish revival which brought a goal by Gregorz Lato — a delicate header — on the hour, and could have carried them into the lead except for the bold and sure-handed Croy in the German goal.

As the Poles pushed forward, the East Germans had a stroke of luck. A ricochet left Hafner unopposed in the middle and he raced through to score easily with only six minutes left.

The Poles replaced Jan Tomaszewski in goal after their nightmare start and his successor Piotr Mowlik certainly looked safer.

Near the end the East Germans brought on their former captain Bernd Bransch, thus qualifying him along with all the other 16 players for at least a silver medal.

Pole upsets field in high jump

Little-known Jacek Wozola of Poland won the Olympic men's high jump gold medal with a leap of 2.25 metres yesterday.

Greg Joy of Canada was second at 2.22, and favoured Dwight Stones, the American record holder, could manage 2.21 for the bronze.

Wozola's best previous jump was only 2.23 metres, while Stones had cleared the world record height of 2.31 at the recent NCAA championships.

All of the jumpers were hampered by a wet approach to the bar because of a steady rain that drenched the Olympic stadium track and infield.

Wozola's winning jump surpassed the Olympic record of 2.24 metres set by American Dick Fosbury in 1968 at Mexico City.

The 19-year-old Wozola is the European junior champion.

Police tell U.S. jumper of threat to kill

MONTREAL — American world record high jumper Dwight Stones said on Saturday that an unidentified person made a threat on his life during the high jump competition at the Olympic stadium, in which he placed third.

The 22-year-old Stones had made some uncomplimentary remarks earlier in the week about French Canadians and Montreal's Olympic Organizing Committee.

"After I was through jumping, four policemen came up to me and said, 'we need to talk to you,' and so we went into the tunnel," said Stones. They said they had received a call that I was going to be shot.

"I was scared to death when I went out on the victory stand," said the bronze medal winner, who appeared upset on the podium and did not wave to the crowd.

He received loud boos throughout the competition and especially during the medal ceremony, the result of his blast at French Canadians.

'British break with Amin is part of plot to bring him down'

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
The Washington Post

LONDON. Britain broke relations with Uganda as part of an orchestrated campaign to topple President Idi Amin, informed sources said here last week.

The plan embraces the U.S. and Kenya, Uganda's neighbour to the east. Close coordination is said to be taking place between the three countries.

It is hoped the U.S. can enlist Sudan and Zaire in the drive to bring Amin down, the sources said.

Western diplomats, who acknowledge that a coordinated effort is under way, insist that it cannot be described as a classic "plot." They describe it as a steady application of economic and political pressure to speed along a process already taking place. The sources however do not rule out the possibility of money and guns being shipped to potential coup leaders.

According to one source, the Anglo-American-Kenyan plan is to try to force Amin out by late autumn. Kenya has already begun the process by cutting off Amin's oil.

One problem is Amin's replacement. There is agreement that he must be a military man, buttressed by able civil servants who are now either in exile in Uganda or in exile.

But the leading military men are generally considered to be as brutal and irresponsible as Amin himself. One Lt.-Col. Yuma, for example, is credited with murdering the American journalist Nicholas Stroh and British university lecturer Robert Stedie in July 1971.

Another is the army Chief of Staff, Maj.-Gen. Mustapha Adridi. A London "Sunday Times" report from Nairobi describes Adridi as "dangerous and almost illiterate."

Ironically, British Intelligence is credited with having put Amin in power by staging the 1971 coup that deposed Milton Obote. But Amin, one time British sergeant, has shown little gratitude.

In 1972 he expelled thousands of Asians with British passports. Last year James Callaghan, then Foreign Secretary and now Prime Minister, was forced to travel to Kampala to plead for the life of writer Denis Hills, whom Amin had sentenced to death for having described him as a "village tyrant."

The breaking point came when hijack victim Dora Bloch, 75, who held both British and Israeli citizenship, disappeared from a Kampala hospital. Authorities in London are convinced she was murdered on Amin's orders in revenge for Israel's successful rescue of the hostages at Entebbe last month.

Britain does not usually break relations to show displeasure, and this action has never been undertaken before against a British Commonwealth country. Foreign Minister Crosland said ties were severed "because British diplomats could no longer do their job."

But this explanation is regarded as purely for public consumption. The break in relations, it is held, will discredit Amin in the eyes of Ugandans and other Africans.

The former colonial states in Africa, British officials believe, tend to have an exaggerated respect for the good opinion of former rulers. By placing beyond the pale, London hopes to encourage his Ugandan foes.

The main reason for U.S. involvement, diplomats here say, is the chance to rid Kenya and present danger. Kenya is as a bulwark against Soviet influence in East Africa.

The mobility of the U.S. and its flexibility in event that limited conflicts brewing permit it to exert influence on coastal countries; can employ and extend a military might to any level, beginning with a demonstration military might and ending with the landing of a landing party.

"It gives a much broader sea-control role in protection Soviet maritime interests against imperialist attempts to a sovereignty over the world oceans and their natural resources... Achieving sea-control success the operation success forces prosecuting primary nations."

"Suddenly, out of the comes the Kiev," the Secret said. "By that single act Soviet move from a navy to out see airpower to a formidable force with sea-air cover, and the first time they have ability to project airpower from isolated areas."

He predicted the Soviet will field at least eight carrier although the U.S. now know only three that are built or under construction.

The U.S. Secretary quoted the following excerpts: "The creation of a Soviet blue-water navy is on a par with obtaining nuclear weapons in terms of importance for world events. The Soviet navy is the only armed force capable of supporting state interests in peace time."

The U.S. Secretary said the Kiev's presence in the Mediterranean has catapulted the Soviet navy to new formidability. He speculated that a Soviet carrier eventually may operate from Cuba.

Adm. Gorshkov's book, "The Sea Power of the State," is not available in the U.S., but portions have seeped through to the West, the secretary told newsmen.

MAO-WATCH GOES ON

LAST WEEK'S earthquakes in China, which may have taken the greatest human toll the world has seen for some time, came as if the political turbulence engendered by Premier Chou En-lai's death in January were not enough to shake the country's stability.

For months the struggle for power has continued, but with both the so-called "radicals" and "moderates" apparently trying to maintain the nation's balance.

And while earthquakes of the magnitude seen last week would have meant a major political and social disaster for any other large country, the Chinese have too long a history of natural and man-made catastrophes to be occupied for long with the latest calamity. They have been engrossed for months now with one subject: Chairman Mao Tse-tung's failing health.

This has never been publicly discussed in China, but it is in the forefront of virtually every Chinese mind. When the "no visitors" sign was hung up on Mao's door on June 15 following a decision by the Communist Party's Central Committee, it was taken everywhere as further evidence that China and the outside world are being prepared for the leader's imminent passing.

Since Lin Biao's fall in 1971 the Chairman had not appeared in public. The only evidence that he was still alive, even though Mao's role may now be merely symbolic.

De facto rule is in the hands of the small Politburo (where moderate and Maoists are equally balanced), and of the Central Committee's Foreign Affairs Bureau. Mao's last meeting with Premier Zhou En-lai was on May 27, (where the moderates are in the minority) in whose name decisions are now being announced.

It should be noted that both the announcement of Mao's retirement and the announcement of Mao's death.

and of the earthquakes were in the name of the Central Committee.

IT IS EVIDENT, however, these decisions are not made whole body. The Central Committee has 195 full members and alternatives, and these are scattered all over the vastness of the Chinese map. There is no sign that a plan, been held since January 1971, in effect, the Politburo standing body of the committee its decisions can be ascribed Central Committee if decisions now being announced, have been made by the Politburo rather than by a Central Committee.

As the world watches Mao's declining decline, questions arise.

Will Mao's experiment to an egalitarian society succeed? China show that its revolution not die as one generation another? Will there be a rap movement between Russia and China? Will the Chinese army be a factor in the Chinese struggle? Most important, who will take over as China's leader? History shows that the Maoist system, no matter the political system, and the good for Communist China, all the efforts made Mao's brand of Maoism.

What is becoming clear is that no individual in leadership can exercise control over the current situation; and this is a threat to the chaos which may follow Mao's death.

ALL THIS has made Wagner a controversial figure in modern German history, and the controversy shows few signs of diminishing.

When West German President Walter Scheel opened the recent Wagner centennial celebrations with a speech at the Bayreuth Festival Theatre, he rejected the theory that Wagner's ideas had played an essential role in Hitler's thought.

In the Ratscheva company, at the Jerusalem Rubin Academy, — receptive and willing. "That should make guest teachers and choreographers prepared to do more for them," she said.

Beginning her career with the Martha Graham company, she left after ten years to form her own company because she had something individual to express. Her main work since then has been choreographing for other companies — most notably for long periods in Mexico.

Position the sheet over the angle iron by removing the short angle irons, sliding in the sheet of wood, and then replacing the angles while an assistant keeps the sheet raised. If this is not possible, carefully cut the board into two pieces and position them; cover the joint between the pieces with a decorative strip.

Next week I will describe how to construct either sliding or opening doors for the intresol.

Fine wouldn't predict how much of an effect the letters will have on the media, but felt that at the least, it could raise the students' own awareness of Israel's problems and needs.

The apparently sophisticated, but actually spineless, approach diminished the dimensions of the music and deprived it of its inner strength and energy. Listening to the quartet one had the impression that it was afraid to play. Dynamics and sonority were strangely colourless. Such an approach cannot provide pleasure or satisfaction.

at local and national media, and at the end of every week, the students (about 40-50 have registered so far) will send letters to editors specifying dates when news coverage was not accurate and ask for a fairer presentation. If the reportage was fair, the students' letters will praise it.

According to Fine, American Jewish college students are much more apathetic to Israel than one

Kibbutz researchers develop 'male-only' fish strain

By YAAKOV FRIEDLER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

FAKIB researchers at kibbutz breeding institutes have developed a new strain of fish, called "Amnoon" in Hebrew, which spawns only male fish. The development is worth thousands of pounds to the kibbutz.

A kibbutz member told The Jerusalem Post that under laboratory conditions the new cross-bred fish, called "Amnoon", can be bred in the ponds themselves. The fish are kept in the ponds until they are ready to spawn, and then they are transferred to the breeding institute.

The fish breeders raised 2,500 tons of "Amnoon" annually alongside the carp and silver carp. They are marketed at between 116 and 18 per kg., according to the season. They are considered an invaluable addition to carp, because they live in a separate "niche" in the ponds, and feed mostly on natural nourishment needing little feed.

Breeders are constantly increasing the quantity of the amnoon because the extra profits they give make up for the poorer commercial showing of the carp.

Offer warns of building drop

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

AVIV — A warning of a drop in the building industry has been issued by the Ministry of Housing, Planning and Construction.

The ministry's report, based on a survey of the building industry, predicts a drop in the number of new building permits issued in 1977.

The report states that the building industry is facing a number of problems, including a shortage of labor, a shortage of materials, and a shortage of capital.

The ministry is urging the government to take steps to address these problems, including increasing the number of building permits issued, and providing financial support to the industry.

AVIV — The equity issue market opened yesterday with prices rising on a broad front.

The market was buoyed by a number of factors, including a rise in the price of oil, and a rise in the price of gold.

The market was also buoyed by a number of factors, including a rise in the price of oil, and a rise in the price of gold.

Political Olympiad

THE TROUBLE-SHOT XXI Olympiad closed yesterday as it had opened a fortnight ago, in unresolved international discord, and with every sign that the Games will never again be the same. Political issues ran roughshod through the Montreal Olympics in open and contemptuous defiance of the platitudes that sports and politics do not mix, and the world's greatest athletic show bore the tragic indelible mark of the Munich massacre.

The International Olympic Committee had decided it would be inappropriate to commemorate the murder of the 11 Israeli athletes by some special ceremony, but the memory was nevertheless ever-present in the massive security precautions which, in the words of the I.O.C. chairman, had put an iron collar around the Games.

Perhaps there is no alternative but to undertake drastic, surgical remedies, if the Olympics are not to deteriorate further into a forum of political strife. Perhaps the ancient Greeks knew best, after all, when they conceived the Games as a pure expression of physical beauty and prowess. It may be that in an ideal world there would be no harm in good-natured athletic competition based on national contingents. Unfortunately, under prevailing conditions, and for the foreseeable future, those engaged in ideological, national or racial strife are not likely to overlook a chance to score at a forum such as is provided by the Olympic Games.

It is probably asking too much to expect the International Olympic Committee fundamentally to tackle the structure of the Games and seek some other than the national form. But at least it might try to modify the flag-raising and playing of national anthems which transform victory in a purely sporting event into some sort of national fetish having little relation to an athlete's ability to run faster, jump higher or throw farther. As a result, one of the most gratifying features of the Montreal Olympics was provided by the repeated upsets in which representatives of countries such as Mexico, Trinidad, Cuba and, yes, New Zealand, could show their heels to the superstars of the great powers.

Certainly the Olympics are worth saving, worth staging as an unmatched spectacle of physical skill, beauty, and a testament to what may be achieved by persistence — even if there are those who say that the sensational East Germans may have overdone this part of it in turning out their amazing Amazons. But if the name of the game is victory, then they have shown the world that a nation of 17 million can hold its own and surpass countries more than 10 times its size not only in producing individual champions but also more of them.

It is also certain that nations competing for the honour of staging the Olympics will be unable also to vie in making them more extravagant than the previous Games. Montreal clearly showed the red light when it had to be bailed out by the provincial government with regard to the runaway costs of preparing for the XXI Olympics. The result was a great sports complex, but one which its planners may now be hard put adequately to exploit.

One answer may have been provided by Greek Premier Konstantin Karamanlis who suggested Greece as a permanent site for the Games. Whether it should be Greece may be open to debate, but the idea of a permanent home is not all that far out.

Chasing phantoms

THERE is an aura of pointless pipil in the reported proposals in the Labour Party concerning the position to be adopted by its convention next year on the issue of the territories. Firstly, it is not at all certain that the party will actually manage to hold its elections this fall and its convention in the winter. Secondly, and more important, there has been not the slightest sign that any Arab state or Palestinian grouping is prepared to entertain thoughts of a settlement with Israel in return for territorial concessions.

The various proposals are meaningful only for other reasons, such as mounting a more effective propaganda campaign among Israeli supporters abroad and preserving the unity of the Labour Party by developing a formula which would enable its disparate components to continue to live together in one party and face the forthcoming election year.

As long as these reasons are kept firmly in mind there is perhaps no harm in the intellectual shadow boxing that is going on in Labour on the territories issue. It is, however, essential that at the same time effective and consistent policy be developed towards the Arab population in the territories and the question of Israeli settlement there. This, however, is a job for the Prime Minister and the Cabinet, and one that should not be shirked nor put off until the election campaign.

ISRAEL PRESS

New danger from north

HAARETZ (independent) says the situation in Lebanon following the recent deal between Syria and the PLO will require extreme alertness on Israel's part. The paper feels various extremist terrorist organizations may secede from the PLO, because Habbash, Fawwaz and Jibril have become accustomed to a large degree of independence in their relations with the various Arab governments and will no longer be willing to accept the dictates of the PLO's Arab leadership.

HATZOFE (National Religious), analyzing the implications of the agreement between the PLO and Syria, says it means Syrian domination of Lebanon, plus freedom for the terrorists to act against Israel from south Lebanon. Up to now, the paper says, Israel has followed a policy of not intervening in the Lebanese struggle. In the light of recent developments, however, the government must consider afresh how best to prevent the dangers arising from new terrorist activity on our northern border. As Syria wishes to show that it, rather than Egypt, is the protector of the Palestinians, it is likely to take steps which may threaten Israel's security, the paper warns.

The Beirut refugee camp of Tel el-Zaatar has become a symbol for both sides. For the Palestinians it is a "Stalingrad" that must resist to the end, and for many rightists it is a hated foreign labyrinth that must be razed.

Tel el-Zaatar: A pawn of both sides

By DOUGLAS WATSON
"The Washington Post"

BEIRUT. — "WE WILL ALL BE DEAD within three days," Dr. Lars Smedmann, a Swedish physician at the long besieged Tel el-Zaatar Palestinian refugee camp radioed Friday.

Despite his plea for immediate help the Red Cross again announced on Saturday cancellation of a planned evacuation of the camp's wounded, saying the evacuation had to be halted because no leaders of predominantly Christian rightist forces had signed a proposed evacuation agreement.

A spokeswoman for the Geneva-based International Committee of the Red Cross said that Saturday's scheduled evacuation effort also had to be cancelled because the rightist forces had said that Red Cross rescuers could not go completely into the camp to bring out the wounded.

Dr. Smedmann, one of only two or three physicians in Tel el-Zaatar, radioed a Swedish news correspondent that he estimated there are 1,400 dead and 1,000 wounded among the 30,000 people in the heavily shelled camp, which is surrounded by rightist forces in East Beirut.

"All I can do is to take the wounded that I think have a chance of survival and try to stop their bleeding," Dr. Smedmann said.

Hundreds of badly wounded were lying around unattended and in great pain, and about half of those in the camp were children, many dying of diarrhea and dehydration.

WATER IS WHAT was most needed in the camp, especially in the last week since water mains into Tel el-Zaatar were either smashed by the constant shelling or the water was cut off by the rightists, as Palestinian spokesmen charge.

Water now can only be obtained in the camp from several dangerously exposed wells. Dr. Smedmann said. Every day many people are killed and wounded when shells hit near them while they are desperately trying to get water.

Rightist military commanders have acknowledged that most of the people who for weeks have been surviving in Tel el-Zaatar's basements and bomb shelters are non-combatants and include many poor Lebanese as well as Palestinian refugees.

The fiercest fighting of Lebanon's bloody 15-month-old civil war has occurred in and around the camp because it has become a symbol to both sides.

For the Palestinians, it is a valiantly defended "Stalingrad," still resisting despite being surrounded since last winter and under heavy siege for 41 days.

There is the suspicion here that Palestinian leaders outside the camp would prefer dead martyrs to their cause than survivors who surrendered.

For many rightists, Tel el-Zaatar is a long-hated foreign labyrinth that must finally be smashed and then bulldozed away so that Palestinians will never live there again.

Recent interviews with Christian Maronites showed more sentiment toward extermination of all Palestinians here than concern for their wounded. "I don't care if they go to Israel, to Syria, or hell," said a civil engineer in Lounieh.

DESPITE EARLIER CLAIMS by the Red Cross and by Dr. Hassan Sabra al-Rholy, the Arab League's special envoy here, that top rightist leaders had given their assurances of cooperation with an evacuation of at least some of the wounded, it was announced Saturday that no rightist leaders had been willing to sign such an agreement — a Red Cross condition for proceeding with the operation.

A previous Red Cross effort to bring the wounded out of the camp was cancelled earlier last week when the Red Cross had the apparent approval of Lebanese President Suleiman Frangieh and Pierre Gemayel, leader of the Phalangist party — but not of Camille Chamoun, the third top rightist leader and head of the largest number of forces surrounding the camp.

ONE OBSTACLE to an evacuation is the rubble that impedes the way into the centre of the camp. To avoid having to carry the wounded by stretcher some 600 metres through the wreckage, a bulldozer will be needed to clear a route for Red Cross trucks.

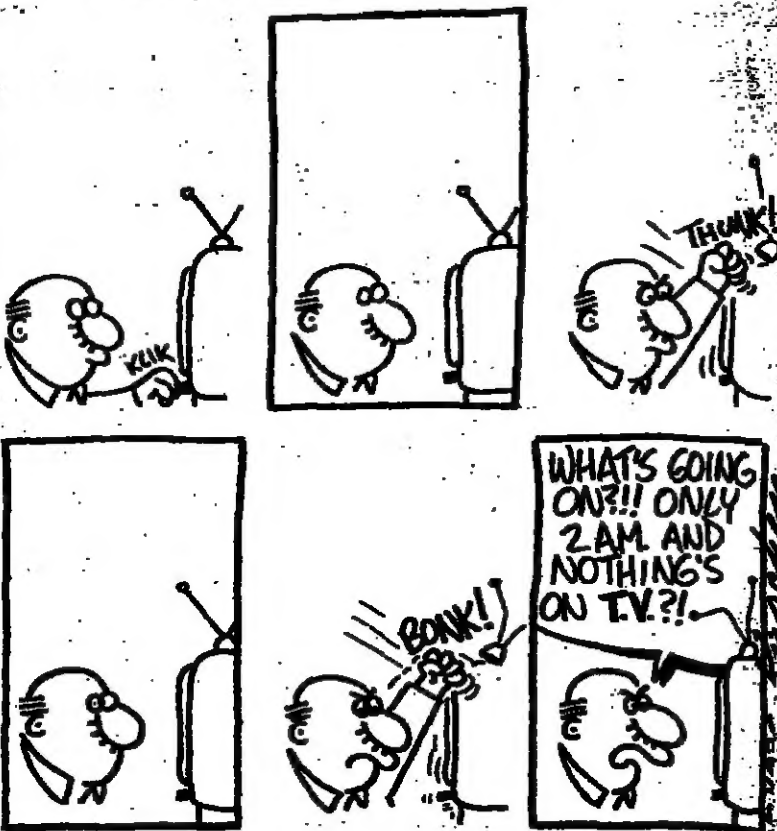

There also is the possibility that rightist forces might allow evacuation of a handful of the camp's wounded, then end the cease-fire, confident that the world had lost interest.

If all of Tel el-Zaatar's wounded ever are evacuated it will place a tremendous strain on West Beirut's hospitals, already overcrowded with war casualties.

The choices for those inside Tel el-Zaatar are grim. They can remain hidden in the rubble, probably assuring their death from thirst and starvation if not by shelling and sniping. Or they can try to surrender, risking being killed by one side or another as they cross no-man's-land or being executed by their captors.

One Chamounist commander said recently that trying to get out to surrender was as dangerous as trying to cross the Berlin Wall.

Dry Bones

POSTSCRIPTS

OUR HEADS spinning with VAT and baskets full of currency, we came across a letter written to us a few months ago. The writer, an English physician, enclosed a cutting from an issue of the "Manchester Guardian" in 1940 (exact date not given). This reported that an Inland Revenue expert from England had arrived in Palestine to advise the High Commissioner on the introduction of Income Tax into the Holy Land.

The news item was followed by a parody of Lewis Carroll's "Walrus and the Carpenter." Beginning "I weep for you," the Walrus said, the poem's last stanza runs as follows:

"With Collectors and Inspectors and Demand Notes red and blue I weep to think of all the future holds in store for you."

With inquiries and rejoinders and assessments and returns The Holy Land is for it, and my heart with pity yearns."

The parody is signed Lucio, which was the pen-name of Gordon Phillips who published a large body of similarly topical humorous verse, and who died about 20 years ago.

ALMOST every time one sees a Knesset session on television, the most striking thing is the absence of the Members. The official explanation is that they are busy in committee (at least electoral reform would give them the excuse of having to visit their constituencies and kiss babies) but we have always suspected they were drinking tea in the cafeteria.

However, we recently learned what may now be the real reason.

Full of enthusiasm for his favourite game, MK Adi Yafa, who is Chairman of the Israel Chess Federation, has presented the Knesset with chess sets; obviously, the map of our legislators spend their queuing up for their turn at chess boards — we don't know, of course, whether this goes according to the party key.

ONE CAN understand the bitter that prompted a comment on Taiwan's English-language publication "China News" on Rina Mor's success in the Miss Universe contest. "Judging at the Miss Universe contest in Hong Kong," the "China News" wrote on July 15, "was a lot more objective than that of the Executive Committee of the International Olympic Committee... refreshing that the judges were intimidated by the realities."

To find honesty in a beauty contest is perhaps symbolic of the time which we live. Morality seems to be when we are asked to sit in judgment on political matters.

"A beauty pageant can be a politics but the Olympiad, which come down to modern times more than 2000 years of a checked history, cannot." On the other hand, we find it odd that "China News" should at the same time suggested since there are likely to be problems involved in Rina Mor's trail world tour as Miss Universe Israel, "having won the title in headlines for her country," retire in favour of Miss Venezuela who came second.

READERS' LETTERS

Sports in the USSR

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. — I am a professional sportswoman (chess), a world championship contender, an honoured master of sports of the USSR (formerly) and an immigrant from the U.S.S.R. I thus have some knowledge of the matters described in Mr. Mellem's article, "Chess starting positions" (July 21) and I am surprised at some of his inconsistencies.

Amateurism and professionalism are time-worn clichés. For many years the difference between amateurs and professionals in the West was aptly attributed to the fact that the former avoided paying income tax. In top level sport, there are only professionals. The people the Russians are competing with at Montreal are full-fledged professionals, regardless of their respective countries of origin. The Russians choose to call their performers amateurs — hardly their only example of double talk.

Mr. Mellem's description of the Soviet sporting world contains errors and misrepresentations.

"Honoured Master of Sport" is not a grade of achievement but an honorary distinction which is sometimes conferred long after retirement from active competition. There is no salary to go with it.

There is no general ban on university students competing in Soviet sportsmen. I graduated after having played two final matches for the female world championship and had to work just as hard for my diploma as any other student, without consideration for my training or competition programme.

Professional sportsmen in the U.S.S.R. do enjoy a better life than many ordinary citizens, although, given the general standard of living in Russia, theirs is still a pretty miserable existence. Incidentally, how do the incomes of Bjorn Borg, Jean Claude Kilij, Rosemarie Mittermayer or Mark Spitz compare with the average income of their countrymen?

There are many countries in which there is no compulsory military service — among them, the U.S.A. which is the chief sporting rival of the U.S.S.R.

Ministers of Sports all over the world report to their Prime Ministers — a Soviet "committee" like the State Committee for Physical Culture and Sport is, by definition, the equivalent of an all Union Ministry.

Finally, the Canadian professionals never trounced the Soviet ice hockey team, nor were they challenged by cocksure Soviets. The sporting public had demanded those matches over a long period of years. When they finally came about, the Soviets lost the first series by a narrow margin and have trounced the Canadians in the subsequent series.

ASIAN GAMES

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. — So the Asian Games Federation would bar Israel from participation in the 1978 Asian Games to avoid "burdensome security measures." Times the A.G.F. has not learned — from the Entebbe rescue — that one can only defeat terrorism by facing up to it.

I hope the Asian Games are televised. I look forward to viewing the competition in crawling and grovelling.

KUPAT HOLIM

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. — The decision to transfer a patient from treatment in a Government hospital to a Kupat Holim hospital is only taken upon instructions of the regional Kupat Holim doctor, or some other doctor, and not by a Kupat Holim clerk, as stated in Macabee Dean's article of July 21 on the subject.
